Membership in the Guild

The San Diego Potters' Guild (SDPG) is both a professional association of potters and a cooperative gallery. Members are required to participate in both aspects of the group. The gallery is open seven days a week and members perform clerking duties, demonstrations, and gallery sitting on a rotating schedule once a month. Clerking duties include: gallery sales, transactions of cash, check and credit cards, balancing the day's transactions, studio housekeeping, and greeting the public in a professional and cordial manner. The SDPG Studio is a working pottery studio and members are encouraged to work and demonstrate techniques to our visitors during their duty day. Members must be available to serve on committees and work with chairpersons of various events, as well as officers of the group.
